

Garrett Hardin was a racist*!

Garrett Hardin

Garrett Hardin (1986)

Born April 21, 1915
Dallas, Texas, U.S.

Died September 14, 2003 (aged 88)
Santa Barbara, California, U.S.

Known for The Tragedy of the Commons
(essay)

Scientific career

Fields Ecology

*racist (n.) -- someone who believes that race is a predictor of intelligence.

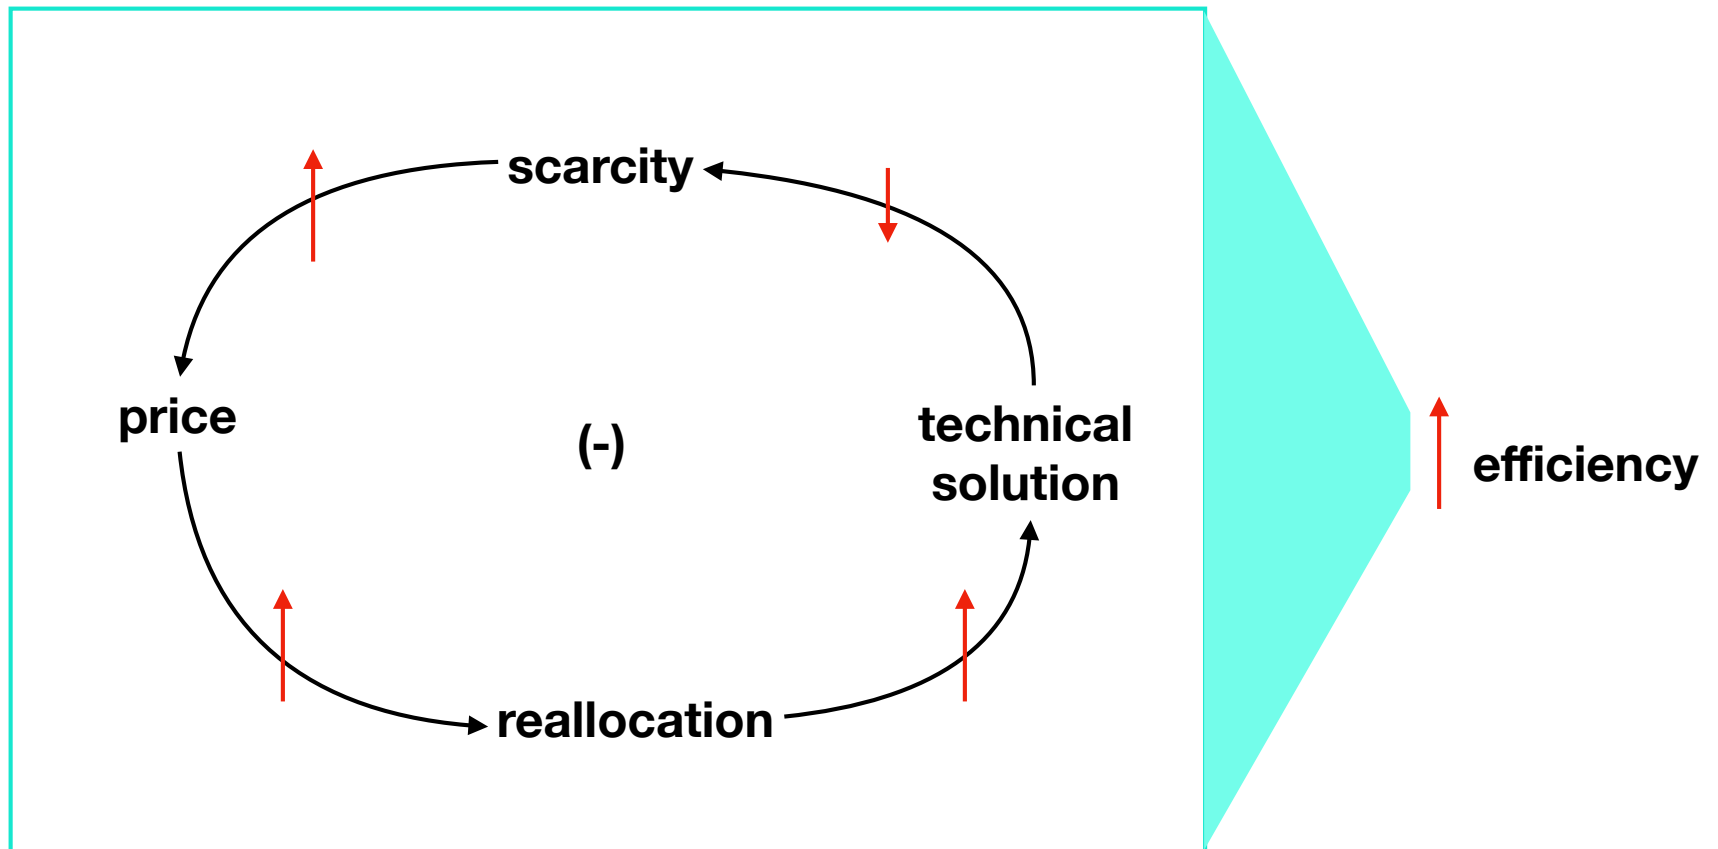

From wikipedia:

Position in the Bell curve controversy and against affirmative action [edit]

In 1994, he was one of 52 signatories on "Mainstream Science on Intelligence",^[17] an editorial written by Linda Gottfredson and published in the Wall Street Journal, which declared the consensus of the signing scholars on issues related to race and intelligence following the publication of the book The Bell Curve. On February 11, 1998, he debated Christian philosopher William Lane Craig at the University of California, Santa Barbara.^{[18][19]}

Hardin's last book The Ostrich Factor: Our Population Myopia (1999), a warning about the threat of overpopulation to the Earth's sustainable economic future, called for coercive constraints on "unqualified reproductive rights" and argued that affirmative action is a form of racism.

Market/technology

Delays?

How does efficiency affect the environment?

